I could never have imagined our friendship would be this - so empty and so pointless. Maybe it was one of those special summer things I'll always remember? Maybe we'll bump into each other again when we're both grown up, working in Paris, or living in New York, and we'll become best friends all over again, without saying a thing. I'd like that, that would be good. Florrie, 14 Sophie Parkin has interviewed girls across the UK exploring one of the most important relationships of their lives - the best friend. What happens to those close teenage friends, and why do some survive and others fail? Sophie also talks to a number of celebrities about their own teenage friendships.
